Claim Objections

Claim 10 is objected to because of the following informalities: In claim 10 line 11, the phrase "any elastic bushing" renders the claim indefinite. The term "any elastic bushing" in claim 10 is a relative term, which renders the claim indefinite. The term "any" is not defined by the claim, the specification does not provide a standard for ascertaining the requisite degree, and one of ordinary skill in the art would not be reasonably apprised of the scope of the invention. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Curtis et al. (6,240,659) in view of Robinson (6,240,663).

Curtis et al. discloses a plow moldboard cutting edge comprising a cutting edge blade (considered the combination of the unnumbered plow blade and frame 70) through holes and bushings 70a, 70b, 70c, 70d as shown in figure 1. Curtis et al., however lacks specifying that the bushings are elastic.

Robinson teaches that it is known in the agricultural art to use elastic bushings 114 with fasteners 112 as part of an attachment means. Additionally, Robinson shows that elastic bushings are an equivalent structure known in the art. Therefore, because these two bushings were art-recognized equivalents at the time the invention was made, one of ordinary skill in the art would have found it obvious to substitute the elastic bushings of Robinson for the unspecified bushings of Curtis et al..

Additionally, the examiner notes that the claimed recitation of "to affix the cutting edge blade to the plow moldboard" is an intended use recitation included in a whereby clause, and that a positive recitation of a plow moldboard separate from the cutting edge blade is not claimed in claim 1.

Claims 1 & 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Curtis et al. (6,240,659) in view of Gehrke (5,525,114).

Curtis et al. discloses a plow moldboard cutting edge comprising a cutting edge blade (considered the combination of the unnumbered plow blade and frame 70) through holes and bushings 70a, 70b, 70c, 70d as shown in figure 1. Curtis et al., however lacks specifying that the bushings are elastic.

Gehrke teaches that it is known in the agricultural art to use elastic bushings 50, including a nonelastic bushing 56 with fasteners 42 as part of an attachment means. Additionally, Gehrke shows that elastic bushings including a nonelastic bushing therein are an equivalent structure known in the art. Therefore, because these two bushings were art-recognized equivalents at the time the invention was made, one of ordinary skill in the art would have found it obvious to substitute the elastic bushings of Gehrke for the unspecified bushings of Curtis et al..

Additionally, the examiner notes that the claimed recitation of "to affix the cutting edge blade to the plow moldboard" is an intended use recitation included in a whereby clause, and that a positive recitation of a plow moldboard separate from the cutting edge blade is not claimed in claim 1.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 2-10 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Claims 11-21 are allowed.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
